QNO1:

Organizations should be more concerned with corporate social responsibility rather than focusing on wealth maximization only. The objectives of an organization are the leading justifications for its existence. Commercial objectives exist to make the maximum possible profits for the shareholders. Wealth accumulation can be termed as the leading motivation for business practice. However, business does not take place in a vacuum. There are concerns of the public who relate with the business that needs to be addressed by the organization. Jonathan and Guay (2006), notes that the existence of an organization should have positive impacts on its host society. Its negative effects should be minimal and mitigated. This reduction of the negative effects while ensuring positive impacts both directly and indirectly is described as the concept of social responsibility. Debate ranges on whether organizations should concentrate in wealth accumulation without social responsibility or whether they should give back a section of their profits to the host community. Prioritizing profit maximization and social responsibility is an issue that calls for attention.

QNO2: as per my knowledge it should be monthly because on annual basis it value shows little bit down
